

2021 Leo W. Seal, Jr., Scholarship Spotlight – Hannah Dieudonne

Metairie, Louisiana | Cabrini High School | Plans to attend: Louisiana State University

An intelligent and motivated student with a potential for a future of unlimited success and accomplishment. Those are just a few of the words that teachers and mentors use to describe Hannah Dieudonne.

With an active social and school life, Hannah is also active in various community service projects in the New Orleans area. She has served as a summer camp counselor, as a food server at St. Luke’s Nursing Home, and as a helper at the Ronald McDonald House.

Setting a great example for other young adults around her, Hannah credits her leadership and work ethic to her part-time job at PJ’s Coffee House. Hannah says what started with the intention of making extra money for social activities and savings, became an important part shaping her into the young adult she is today.

Coffee store manager Emma Boudreaux, applauds Hannah and states that “while rising above the employee standard, Hannah continues to be an exemplary role model to her peers while maintaining a balanced school schedule, work schedule and even a high school senior social life.”

As far as academics are concerned, Hannah is one of Cabrini High School’s finest her teachers say. She continually takes on new responsibilities in various clubs, volunteer work, and extracurricular endeavors while still finding time to keep up with academic demands as an honor roll student. Hannah’s other achievements include being a member of the Science Honor Society, a recipient of the 100+ Service Hours Star Award, and employee of the month.

Teacher Paul Distler states, “Her spirit is one of compassion and social justice. Her outstanding accomplishments in service prove this fact.”

Hannah is from Metairie, Louisiana. She plans to study finance at Louisiana State University, with hopes of becoming a financial advisor in a firm that offers services to a diverse group of clients. She says her passion for finance comes primarily from her aunt and legal guardian, Kerrie Duvernay, Director of Treasury Management.
